Erik, your memo is getting around! FYI in case you haven't seen the article below.

For the rest of the group, I just wanted to get back to you on EPA's voluntary pesticide program to reduce drift. I think it's too early to say how much this program will be used to put into the rationale though it sounds like a great program. Linda Liu in R10 Pesticides also sent me a copy of the article, but said that she doesn't know if the States will be interested in the program.

I'm going to be down for the Midcoast TMDL meetings next week. Just FYI, Oregon DEQ expects there to be some CZARA questions and asked me to respond/speak to them. I assume it'll be questions on timing and perhaps people talking about their concerns with 319 cuts. I'll let you know if anything interesting happens, and also won't be on Tuesday's call. (I think Alan's out too for OWEB meetings.)

Non-Responsive

Thanks for sharing the article, Alan. Did you see in the comments, the reporter noted "For those wanting to read more about how laws compare, I found this US EPA analysis to be authoritative: <https://www.scribd.com/doc/244136481/Comparative-Analysis-PNW-Forestry-Requirements-for-Aerial-Application-of-Pesticidesx>"?

This is the Oregonian's follow-up article. It compares ODF's spray buffers with the buffers in Idaho, Washington and California.
